Addressing the Surge in Consumer Scams

Remitly is taking significant steps to educate customers on online scams and enhance their safety. This month, Remitly launched a new Trust & Safety Center, developed in collaboration with Get Safe Online. Additionally, Remitly is proud to join the Aspen Institute's National Task Force on Fraud and Scam Prevention, collaborating with industry leaders and policymakers to develop the first coordinated U.S. national strategy to help prevent scams and fraud at its root and protect consumers from these bad actors. These initiatives demonstrate Remitly's unwavering commitment to safeguarding customers and promoting trust in every transaction.

Introducing the Remitly Trust and Safety Center

At Remitly, we understand how devastating consumer scams can be to the individuals who send cross-border payments to support loved ones abroad, and we're determined to help our customers recognize and avoid them. With this in mind, we're launching the Remitly Trust & Safety Center, a dedicated resource designed to help you and your loved ones identify and avoid common money transfer scams this holiday season and beyond. This resource provides insights into prevalent scam tactics and offers practical advice on safeguarding personal information during transactions. Customers exploring the center can expect:

- Common Scam Types. Learn about prevalent scams targeting remittance senders and recipients, such as phishing, impersonation, and social engineering.
- Proactive Safety Tips. Discover simple steps you can take to protect yourself, from setting up two-factor authentication to identifying red flags in suspicious communications.
- Expert Insights. Access guidance from our Trust & Safety team, who work tirelessly to safeguard transactions and keep our systems secure.
- Interactive Quiz. To help customers spot potential scams, we've developed an engaging interactive quiz featuring real-world scenarios. With instant feedback and practical tips, the quiz equips users to recognize threats and confidently safeguard their information.

Joining the Aspen Institute's National Task Force on Fraud and Scam Prevention
